

Unrest has increased

SINCE THE installation of the illegal and non-supported interim government, unrest has been increasing in Namibia.

On the first day of its establishment, the people of Namibia were shown how they were going to be treated. Peace-loving Namibians were beaten and teargassed that day. Since then people have been detained without trial and those in rural areas have been having sleepless nights because of intimidation.

I have personally seen how people are intimidated, and then commanded not to report the matter. The perpetrators of the intimidation claim they can do what they want because the people are 'Swapo supporters'. Some of the armed men pretend to be Swapo insurgents when they rob and frighten the people.

All these things have been taking place since the interim government came into being.

If the interim government was established to bring peace and order and move the country towards independence, why don't they implement Resolution 435. We know however, that the aim is to delay the independence of Namibia.

We still want the implementation of Resolution 435. Away with ideas of delaying our independence. Do not link our independence to the presence of Cubans in Angola. Angola is an independent country and we don't see Cubans in Namibia.
