

We won't forget

ALLOW me to compliment the 'just' comrades in exile; particularly the leader of the liberation struggle, Mr Sam Nujoma and his offspring. I wish them all a happy Christmas and prosperous New Year.

We in the interior of Namibia won't forget you; even some of those whose minds are clogged with money and are still collaborating with the SA occupation forces. We don't follow the cowardly campaign and love of money of those who regard themselves as South African mercenaries.

We must re-dedicate our lives to our country. Daily we are praying for those in exile and for our Namibia to be free. That is why we say we won't forget, and you are repeatedly in our memories.

To those who are killed, maltreated and detained: Jesus was similarly tortured and killed for us to live. To those in exile: one day we will be happy together in an independent Namibia.

Racial discrimination, apartheid, detention without trial, exploitation and all colonial actions, will be forgotten by all Namibians who love peace and stability. No Namibian will be in exile as is the case at present. Remember ya Toivo's remarks: "The liberation struggle is long and bitter".
