

Living In Hell

I AM sure that every peace-loving citizen of this planet was horrified by the senseless loss of life when America was attacked, but believe me some others were celebrating this massacre, just to remind us that we are living in hell on this planet.

To every American who has lost a father, mother, sister, brother, son, daughter and friend there is only one being who can console you in times like this and that is the Lord our God. Take refuge in Him since there is no cross too heavy for Him to carry.

The big and powerful US has a long history of imperialism which has created an established array of enemies, ie. fanatics, extremists, fundamentalists, militants of all types. The US had been assisting people like Savimbi, the late Mobutu Seseko and many African dictators and the former minority apartheid regime of South Africa. Also through the 1960s the Vietnam war; the steadfast support of Israel; and economic sanctions and other steps against Iraq without stopping. All these resulted in death of innocent civilians.

I do not support killing of innocent people whoever commits such acts, whether they be fanatics or Americans or whoever. However, the American people must keep an eye on the foreign policy of their country. If they see that the policy is wrong they must make it known to their government that it is wrong. If they keep quiet than they agree to what America is doing in foreign countries or they will continue to perish in such attacks.

The US will investigate this attack and dispatch missiles accordingly to those supposed to be responsible for this attack. That will be revenge and in turn the extremists will react again.

Revenge is not for human beings to take, revenge is reserved for God. Since after every act of revenge more innocent civilians will die. After all this who will be the good one and who will be the bad one? Both will be bad since they kill innocent civilians.

If peace and love could be bought with money America could have been the country of choice to live in. Love is to sit down and listen to the poorest person's problems, to try to solve them and assist to the best of your ability, even those who hate you. Let God be with the American people especially those who lost dear ones, to have the strength to go through this hell. Let the Lord also be with those responsible for the attack before they fall into the same hell they created for others.
