

SA Ministers visit

I WISH to express my point of view concerning the recent visit of high-ranking South African Government Ministers to Namibia. One wonders why they do this because it has no meaning for Namibians. Is it possible that South Africa's Defence Minister could concern himself with the Constitutional Council?

Did they come here to talk about the real situation in Namibia, or did they come to give instructions to their pawns in the interim government? Did they come to re-inforce the curfew restrictions? What is the purpose of protecting a minority when they disregard the wishes of the majority?

Namibians are suffering daily, longing for independence, crying for self-determination and implementation of Resolution 435; but our human dignity is detrimentally affected by the so-called SADF and SWATF, the latter created illegally in our country.

I feel their visit was a provocation to the oppressed people of Namibia, and those who welcomed them here must be people who have lost interest in Namibian affairs.

Let SA leave Namibia in peace; let them give the Namibians what they want and forget about creating confusion with an appointed, unrecognised government which works under SA control.

Their daily Afrikaans language mouthpiece, instead of exposing the realities, hinders the truth and misleads the people. This propaganda has no benefit to our nation. Why don't they want to test the peoples' will in a free and fair election under UN supervision and control?

We need true leadership, elected by the people, and we believe Resolution 435 is the best solution to the Namibian question.
