

On grant to ANC

ALLOW me to make some remarks about the one million Rand donation to the ANC by the Namibian Government. I would also like to refer to Moses Katjioungua's objections in this regard.

- the majority of Namibians who were, are and continue to be taxpayers elected the government, consciously aware of and supportive of its policy to rule and to preside over financial matters;

- we are also fully cognisant of the fact that we are a product of international solidarity, a member of the OAU and the Non-Aligned Movement and the world at large. With our limited resources we should work ceaselessly towards the speedy decolonisation and early attainment of freedom for the people of South Africa;

- the question one should ask is not to which political organisation or party one renders support, but whether such action would reverse or accelerate the gains already made; or whether the people of SA could derive maximum benefit from such limited support. At the end of the day when South Africa is ultimately free, it will be for all its people and not for a particular party or organisation;

- finally, when the honourable MP Katjioungua was studying in Sweden, did he ever consider himself a fortunate Namibian using Swedish taxpayers' money, because of that Government's unwavering support for the Namibian cause, and even though there may have been some individuals who disagreed?

- of course, a working democracy always requires that there will be a few voices of dissent.
