

Leading From The Front

MUCH noise has been made about the fourth term. Everyone with ears who dares to care has heard the President saying the constitution does not allow him to stand again. He has said he would retire at the end of his current term. So that is not the debate we should be having, instead we should focus on who will take the mantle further.

For a start, the Prime Minister should have moved one step up. But given the fact he has reduced the weight of the office of the Prime Minister to only opening anything that needs to be opened (public relations events) in the hope of being seen in areas where he has never been seen before, and the fact that his wife's business interests (one JWG Advertising) does not pay tax to the Government as required by law, his leadership is in serious doubt. That leaves only two other leaders - the Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Minister of Lands who can perform better. It is time they are given the chance to lead from the front.

Concerned Citizen
Windhoek

Note: Name and address provided - Ed