

Fears for March 21

WE, the people of the far north of Namibia are afraid of what might happen on the day of independence for Namibia.

The rumours are doing the rounds by ex-members of 101 and Koevoet while they are under the influence of alcohol that mobs will attack civilians on March 21. One wonders whether there are still weapons hidden in the area or not.

To assure our safety on that day, we request the Administrator General and the Chief of Police and UN Special Representative to conduct searches in the area for possible weapons caches.

We are now familiar with these people who are talking freely and without fear in our presence. Because we love and want peace, this gives them good reason not to fear us.

I can assure the leaders of independent Namibia that there are many more weapons caches in areas of the north. The nation wants peace and they don't want to go back to war again.
