

the old man was permanently disabled, and later he died.

Many of our people found themselves without homes, many had been buried in unmarked graves, many were also in detention, and some have been missing for fifteen years.

It can be that some of you were wrongfully detained, or wrongfully suspected of being spies, but it is now time to forget and to reconcile in the interests of peace.

Lastly to the parents of those detained, don't defect from Swapo - think of all those fellow countrymen who died at Cassinga - an attack that could have resulted from the information of spies.

Let us join hands and forget what happened in the past. We must fight the real enemy - South Africa - through the liberation movement Swapo.

To detainees

THIS letter is directed at ex-Swapo detainees who were used by the SA colonial regime to spy on Swapo outside the country. Dear comrades and fellow countrymen, I think you have to be thankful to the Swapo leadership that your lives were spared.

Let me inform you what happened inside the country during your absence. Many of our people disappeared, were tortured, and women raped.

Some of you were beaten, but here a young boy's face was held near the exhaust of a idling Buffel military truck, causing permanent scarring on his face. An old man in Kavango was roasted alive by South African soldiers, and the soldiers were fined R50 while
