

Migrants speak

MIGRANT labourers here at the CDM Mine in Oranjemund were put on a pension system about ten years ago, and there is some secrecy about the pension system at the mine.

Migrant labourers are told that it is impossible to fix their pensions, and there are no statistics to show or record such employee's monthly, yearly or contractual deductions.

We are not told why it is impossible to give these statistics.

There is no written record to show the pension deductions; many at the recruitment centre at Ondangua are not allowed to return to work, but where is their pension?

I agree that employees could be guilty of crimes and expelled, as happens to many, but who gets their pension?

Migrant labourers are taxed like other permanent employees.

I appeal to those in management to assist in solving these problems, as the labourers have no other way in which to follow up the matter. There is also the fear of being expelled if they reveal these matters.
