

Tax Relief For Parents

I TAKE this opportunity to praise Nahas Angula and Ya Kasita for their insight into the financial strain that the current educational system puts on parents. The Namibian of May 11 reported on the suggestions made by the two gentlemen in their respective Houses with regard to tax rebates and exemption to parents who pay for their children's studies at the University of Namibia and other institutions of higher learning.

These government officials' proposal is a testimony that they recognise the role played by Namibian parents in financing their children's education. These parents have a great need for a tax relief by the government. What they do is obviously to the benefit of the entire nation.

Furthermore, recognition of the burden that tuition fees place on many parents clearly shows that Angula and Ya Kasita identify with the masses.

I patiently wait for these humane proposals to become a reality.
