

When Headmen March On 4th Term

THE recent marching of Swapo kings and headmen is a wrong move. It's a pity that our people, when they are in numbers supporting the same idea, think they are right. They think that means "one Namibia, one nation". What we must think of is what the fourth term means for us as Namibian nation, not to make one man happy. What is the extent of its advantages and disadvantages? The fourth term is costly. It will lead to more hunger and poverty. Peace can never be maintained by an individual human being, unless it is deserved by all.

The demanded referendum is an additional election. Where will the millions of dollars come from? Will the nation be sacrificed again for an individual advantage and benefit? Are we really serious? To change the constitution to allow a fourth term means money (millions). This burden will be put on the already suffering Namibian shoulders. Hearing the Government has no money, and hence we have a very limited time, due to the lack of funds, for the re-registration of elections.

The money will be misspent as we still have a high unemployment rate in the country and those in the recent youth service scheme from Grootfontein could be employed. Or is it Swapo party that will fund the referendum?

The extent of love within a human being is the same as hatred. Chiluba in Zambia is an example of the peoples' turning point from love to hatred. Next, the same people who are chanting, "We did not sleep, we want Sem...blah, blah". They will call for prosecution after they discovered the disrespect of our country's constitution by him and the misuse of our country's limited resources for individual benefit. Which reasons will they give and what difference will they make between the current President and his successor who will be demanding a third and fourth term? He will also be liked and supported by a majority like Nelson Mandela and Bill Clinton. It is the same type of people who will march again then.
