

A Pain For The Youth

I WILL always be saluting the patronage of this widely read and informative newspaper. The Namibian newspaper still has the monopoly in terms of good reporting both during the colonial and post colonial period - it is still reporting things as they are.

The aforementioned statement cannot be defeated by any useful and responsible Namibian citizen. The government does things without looking at the implications associated with its actions. One would always wonder if the top government officials, including the President, have advisors at all. Being unemployed, we the youth of this nation learnt with dismay of the government ban from advertising in the Namibian. It is very expensive for us job seekers to buy both the New Era and The Namibian at the same time. If the government is shameful to come back to The Namibian it must establish a free of charge weekly paper where we can get the government job adverts. Otherwise there will be no need to campaign for the next elections nor bark about peace and stability.
