

Keep To The Real Issues

ONCE again Minister Ekandjo comes to the conclusion that both the CoD and the NSHR are State enemies. We the Namibian citizens are convinced that Minister Ekandjo - being the Home Affairs Minister - has many other and for that matter REAL enemies on his doorstep.

All Swapo election rallies are financed by taxpayers money - e.g. going to constituencies with Government cars - using telephones and fax machines in Government offices etc. Taxpayers money should not be abused to mislead and manipulate the electorate.

Mr. Ekandjo why not rather concentrate on the "real" enemies - like the daily rape of toddlers/children and women. What is being done about that? Your Ministry takes more than a year to process an ID card - which on the other hand is compulsory to have. Why is every law abiding citizen behind bars to-day to safeguard personal belongings whilst the criminals walk around free. Why does the Police never have cars to go out and investigate crime? On the accusation of the NSHR - never have we heard that anybody, either in the office or a member, was accused of human rights abuses. However, on many, many occasions members of the NDF and the Police force have well been found guilty. Please concentrate on real and hard pressing problems and don't deviate to distract the electorate and misinform them.

Mr. Mwinga at a Swapo rally "invites" Afrikaners to join the party and feel at home and contribute to the country's development. Sounds rather hypocritical as only a week ago Namibians were instructed by the NUNW that no Afrikaner can head a parastatal.

His qualifications might be outstanding but if he is not affiliated to Swapo all the doors are shut. Rather have the SSC be corrupt and have millions (taxpayers' hard earned money) unaccounted for. "How can someone without history compete with someone who has a history." Mr Ekandjo and Mr. Mwinga and comrades - you are stuck in the sixties - "that is history" - the world has since moved on.

Parties come and go - Swapo will not be around for eternity - new parties will come up and bring in new ideas as well as solutions to the problems.

If Swapo is so concerned about Namibians' future - e.g. education, housing, hospitals - why squander millions and millions on a State palace and just accept that the basis will always be happy with crumbs falling from the laden table.

Mr. Ekandjo - we the Namibian citizens - request you to stick to the real issues at election campaigns and not make allegations to score cheap points - the electorate might hold you accountable one day.
